

Leverage Your ADHD

Un-Overwhelm Guide

How do I make sense of everything in my mind?

BRAIN DUMP

- Dump out everything on your mind.

IDENTIFY

- Identify the broad groups these belong to

MERGE

- Merge the groups into six or fewer

SORT

- Sort your brain dump into groups

CATEGORIZE

- Categorize each item on your list

CLARITY

- With your newfound clarity, act on one item

First, brain dump!

Don't hold back! The goal is to empty your mind. It doesn't matter whether it's about home, work, or how you're feeling.

Now, identify categories for the items on your brain dump.

Here are some suggestions. Feel free to make your own.

- Project A, Project B
- Work, home, volunteer
- Health, social, tasks

Next, merge your categories to a maximum of six

Now, rank your categories by adding a number in the white circle:
1 being the highest, 6 being the lowest

Sort each item into its respective group

1

2

3

4

5

6

misc / notes

Now that you've sorted your list, it's time to categorize them by importance.

Create a personal action key to identify important tasks

-  run DO NOW – it's important and time sensitive
-  jog DO LATER – it's important but not urgent
-  stop DON'T ACT – it's important but doesn't need any action
-  give DELEGATE – it's actually someone else's task

action key: draw an icon of your choice that corresponds to each action key

run	jog	stop	give
 _____	 _____	 _____	 _____

Finally, go back to your sorted list and use your action key to prioritize each item with its respective icon

Congrats, you have taken the first step on achieving clarity to un-overwhelm your brain.

Want to know more about how to navigate with confidence and ease?
Go from to do to done?

Book your 1:1 coaching consult to dive deeper

leverageyouradhd.com